

Southeast Brass Quintet

November 12th, 2008
Wednesday, 12:30 P.M.
Sadie's Place at Kent Library

The Southeast Brass Quintet was formed in the early 1990's with a dedication to the performance of brass chamber music from all eras. Past performances include many community service events in and around Cape Girardeau. The Southeast Brass Quintet has also worked with the Paducah Symphony. This group is incredibly busy, usually filling their calendars with over 30 engagements a year!

A quintet indicates five members, and the Southeast Brass Quintet is no exception. Comprised of three SEMO brass faculty members plus one student and one community member, the group gains the continuity and experience of its three core members and the variety and excitement that come with the student and community guest performers. Be sure to attend this special performance! This performance is open to the public and refreshments will be served.

Southeast Brass Quintet faculty:

Robert Conger (Trombone), an associate professor of music, directs the Southeast Jazz Program, teaches applied low brass, conducting, and instrumental music education.

Marc Fulgham (Trumpet), professor of music, is in demand as an adjudicator and clinician at high schools and universities.

Bary W. Bernhardt (Trumpet), associate professor of music, is the director of University Bands at Southeast Missouri State University. In addition, Bernhardt teaches courses in Marching Band Techniques, Jazz Appreciation and Instrumental Conducting.

Guest Performers:

Charles Kelley (Tuba) is a Southeast alumnus who is employed by the Drury Corporation and lives in Jackson.

Ken DeArman (Trombone) is a junior performance major from Dexter.

Kent Library hosts: Mary Langston, Pat Willingham, Amber Miranda and Michaela Willi Hooper
